Greetings Region 5 Members!

Many people have asked me "what's the role of State Representatives?" When I joined IAVM before the days of e-mail, State Representatives were a conduit for information. They were part of the hierarchy of leadership for the organization and a place to start getting involved. They were like ice breakers. When you were looking for information about someone or something, you could reach out to them to start a conversation about the subject. They were senior members who knew other members. They were helpful and willing to share information. We would call our State Representatives and run questions up the chain of command through them. While communication methods have evolved, the importance of State Representatives have not. You'll note in this edition of the Region 5 newsletter that we've added the name and e-mail address of your State Representatives (see below). Feel free to reach out to them with questions to help with a Chapter meeting or suggest content for this newsletter. They are knowledgable individuals and some will surely be leaders of our organization in years to come.
If you haven't already done so, please make sure to save April 7-9, 2019 for the Super Regional Meeting in Daytona Beach. Your Region is hosting the meeting this year and planning is well underway. Have an idea you think would be of interest on the program? Please let Brandi Quick, CVE (b.quick@dittolanding.org) or myself (cdyer@vbgov.com) know. We are chairing the program committee and looking for content. We’ve got some useful sessions in store, but are looking for more.

ORLANDO - Camping World Stadium Honored with KultureCity's Community Advocacy Award

Camping World Stadium was recently recognized for its sensory inclusivity and presented with the KultureCity Community Advocacy Award at the fifth annual KultureBall in Birmingham, AL. Since 2013, KultureCity has been a catalyst for change in society, creating an inclusive future where all individuals with autism and their families are accepted and treated equally. The organization has helped more than 100,000 individuals coast-to-coast.

During the 2018 NFL Pro Bowl, Camping World Stadium debuted new sensory accessibility resources and two dedicated sensory rooms allowing families to enjoy the game with confidence and comfort. The rooms feature multisensory-play therapy fixtures, technology stations and soothing colors while creating a peaceful space away from stadium noise. KultureCity provided comprehensive training to stadium staff, which included recognizing guests with sensory needs and sharing methods for healthy interaction and communication with sensory-sensitive patrons.

"It's an honor to be the recipient of the Community Advocacy Award," said Allen Johnson, Chief Venues Officer for the City of Orlando. "We're dedicated to providing a welcoming environment for every patron visiting the stadium and our partnership with KultureCity is essential to furthering that effort.”

Sensory inclusiveness benefits more than just kids with autism, sensory processing issues, attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and Down syndrome; it benefits anyone who is experiencing sensory overload. KultureCity's initiative has established a standard with the hopes that all public spaces embrace the sensory movement.

ATLANTA - New Beehives Creating a Sustainability Buzz on GWCCA Campus

On August 17 the Georgia World Congress Center Authority (GWCCA) unveiled the organization's first ever beehives on our downtown Atlanta campus.

Located in the grassy pocket park on the southwest corner of Northside Drive and Boone Boulevard, three new hives were introduced to Authority team members and media amidst activities such as honey tastings, a do-it-yourself pollinator kit station, and an opportunity to meet the beekeepers from Bee Downtown, a North Carolina-based company focused on revitalizing bee populations in urban environments.
Each of the Authority's three business units (Operations, Administration, and Commercial) were assigned a hive to be painted and decorated by team members from each of those areas, respectively (pictured above). The result is a colorful array of unique designs including an homage to some of the Authority's long-standing partners and events, as well as a Beyoncé-themed "Bey-hive."

Why bees, you ask? GWCCA's long-term success depends on honey bees. They pollinate a third of the food we eat and serve, and they're also responsible for pollinating many plants and flowers that keep Centennial Olympic Park and the rest of our campus looking bee-autiful. Fortunately, our organization recognizes this important nexus and is aiming to support a honey bee population that has been in decline for years.

Leigh-Kathryn Bonner, the founder and CEO of Bee Downtown, said the Authority's beehives will positively affect 18,000 acres nearby in a three-mile radius, pollinating urban gardens in the area, neighborhood flora and school landscaping.

Georgia World Congress Center Authority Announces Key Personnel Changes

The GWCCA announces that Erik Waldman has accepted the newly-created position of Sr. Director of Special Events, and the organization also wishes a fond farewell to Sr. Event Coordinator Eric Invaldsen who is leaving for a position as Sr. Event Manager with Chicago's McCormick Place.
Waldman, who most recently served as Sr. Director of Client and Guest Services joined the Authority in 2011 as Director of Event Operations, is now overseeing the GWCCA’s day-to-day planning for Super Bowl LIII. In 2016, he earned his Certified Venue Executive certification from IAVM, and he also serves as Region 5 treasurer.

"With Super Bowl LIII right around the corner (less than 200 days away), and the significance of this event to the city of Atlanta and our campus, we saw a need to have someone 100 percent committed to leading the charge day-to-day," said GWCCA Chief Commercial Officer Joe Bocherer. "Erik, as the true pro that he is, seemed like an obvious choice to take on this critical role for GWCCA, and he accepted the challenge." Erik has done a great job over this past year as our Sr. Director of Client and Guest Services leading his team and launching several new initiatives along the way, all while strengthening our service culture as an organization. Erik's past experience as Director of Event Operations at the Georgia Dome, coupled with his roles here at GWCCA - will no doubt lead us to the successful execution of Super Bowl LIII."

SANDY SPRINGS - The Sandy Springs Performing Arts Center at City Springs enjoyed a successful grand opening in August! From August 11 through August 19, guests were treated to an array of performances highlighting the types of programming they can expect to see at the new venue.

The week-long celebration kicked off with City Springs Day - a day full of free community performances and a sold out Branford Marsalis Quartet that evening. Highlights from the opening celebration include a pop-up acoustic performance from Sandy Springs resident, Ed Roland of Collective Soul, a sold out jazz cabaret show with local musician Joe Grandsen and America's Got Talent winner, Landau Eugene Murphy, Jr., and the week closed out with a powerful performance by Tony Award winning and Georgia native, Sutton Foster.

City Springs is a 14-acre campus featuring a performing arts center, conference center, green space, residential, retail and municipal offices. It was envisioned as a place for community activity and identity, and its design as a gathering spot for business, commerce and residential contributes to that sense of place desired by the citizens of Sandy Springs.
NEW ORLEANS - The New Orleans Ernest N. Morial Convention Center successfully conducted a Fire Drill on July 30 in cooperation with the New Orleans Fire Department. The 350 staff members of the Convention Center participated in the exercise in order to demonstrate their understanding of emergency evacuation procedures.

The emergency scenario simulated a kitchen fire in one of the employee break rooms. The alarm was sounded at 9am, the building was evacuated, and the drill was ended just over 5 minutes later. This exercise demonstrated how Convention Center staff can assist our guests in the event of an emergency evacuation.

"We're happy with the performance of the Convention Center staff during the fire drill," said Mark Kaufman, Director of Public Safety for the New Orleans Ernest N. Morial Convention Center. "Our preparedness in emergency situations is a priority for us as we continue to assist first responders in any way we can."

FLORENCE - Florence Center Announces Self-Produced Fair

Earlier this year Florence Center officials announced strategic plans to launch a new 11-day fair for South Carolina. The Greater Pee Dee State Fair & Expo will debut this September 6-16 in Florence, South Carolina and promises to impress the region with major attractions, mega thrill rides, and world-class amusements.

The Greater Pee Dee State Fair will provide a safe setting for fun, healthy family entertainment featuring music, attractions, shows, animal exhibits, arts and crafts. The fair will also showcase the many diverse business interests in South Carolina. In addition, the fair will host a high-quality traveling amusement company with nearly 50 state-of-the-art carnival rides, games and food concessions.

The magnitude of this fair will deliver far more than anything else like it in the area," stated Paul Beard, General Manager for the SMG-managed Florence Center.

In addition to rides and carnival games, the all-new fair features live alligator wrestling, a pirate show, comedy acts, aerialists, magic, exotic animals, street dancers, helicopter rides, and live music daily on the iHeartMEDIA concert stage.

"We've been hard at work for many months now to ensure we have the highest-caliber entertainment and attractions. It's our first year and we're going to make a big impression. We're ready to see our efforts pay off for our clients, staff, and the community," said Beard.
